

Offer of Free Productivity Assessment for your Company

Measuring and improving productivity within your company is critical to ensuring you get the most out of your staff and processes. Finding your roadmap to business growth against a backdrop of limited managerial capacity, skills shortages and restricted regional support services are challenges that face every business. To help you navigate these challenges we have partnered with Cardiff Metropolitan University to give you the opportunity to assess your businesses productivity, focusing on the impact of management and leadership practices.

This is your chance to examine the outcomes of a recent productivity research report Cardiff Metropolitan University have published in conjunction with the Hodge Foundation, and relate them directly to your business so that you can identify the gaps and shortfalls in your organisation and recognise ways to overcome them.

You will participate in a highly interactive closed session with a small number of businesses, facilitated by the authors of the report and chaired by our President, Paul Slevin. This will give you a valuable and insightful evaluation of your business productivity. It should help you identify the obstacles to measuring performance and offer ways to overcome them. This session can be followed up by a second roundtable that will look at developing some important KPIs that can be used to benchmark your company and improve productivity.

There is no cost to taking part in this activity. You will receive a short questionnaire which takes 10 minutes to fill and will be used to drive and tailor the content of the roundtable. If you would like to take part in this activity please email:
